BUILDING CONNECTIONS WITH MS. COLLIER:

Finding Hope Beyond the Hallways and Into the Future

Before titles or careers, Ms. Collier describes herself as a traveler, a reader, and a lifelong learner who finds meaning in the details others might overlook. She has stood on the cliffs of Iceland mid-jump for a travel photo, crocheted plants that now display in her office, and laughed with friends and family in a SpongeBob voice that surprises nearly everyone who hears it. Her life has been shaped by these small, personal moments, as well as the bigger journeys that have taken her across Russia, Wales, and Canada. Family has always been at the heart of who she is. She speaks with pride about the strong ties that connect her across generations. For her, travel has never been about checking places off a list, but about building bridges between the past and the present, and discovering the stories of those who came before.

SpongeBob Laughs, Everyday Joy

Not many people can say they can stop a conversation mid-sentence with a spot-on SpongeBob laugh, but Ms. Collier can. For her, the impression isn't just a silly sound. It's a reminder that joy can come from the simplest, most unexpected places. Her laugh reflects the playful, hopeful energy she brings into everyday life.

P.S. If you stop by her office, there may be a chance she'll give you a live demonstration.

Experiences From Wales: A Story of Family, Memory, and Presence

Ms. Collier has always met life with movement, whether through ballroom dance, which carried her across Russia as part of a performing team, or through travels that have taken her from Iceland's cliffs to the green hills of Wales. Together, these experiences have shaped the way she faces challenges: not as barriers, but as invitations to grow. That spirit became especially important in 2021, when her mother was diagnosed with dementia.

Rather than letting the diagnosis define their family's story, she chose to see it as another journey to become stronger. In 2022, she took her mother to Wales, the birthplace of her grandfather. What might have been a bittersweet trip became a heroic act of love, where they uncovered hidden family records.

For her, these experiences show a resilience through movement. Whether stepping onto a ballroom floor, boarding a plane to a new country, or guiding those in need, she carries every step forward with an act of hope.
